Background

On November 7, 2006, Arizonans made a historic decision on behalf of our state's young children. By majority vote, they passed Proposition 203, a citizen's initiative to fund quality early childhood development and health programs for kids birth to age 5, before kindergarten. Voters backed that commitment with an 80-cent per pack increase on tobacco products, so that funding for early childhood services would not be at the mercy of economic and political winds.

The initiative also created the First Things First state Board and regional partnership councils to share the responsibility of ensuring that these funds are spent on strategies that will result in improved education and health outcomes for Arizona's young children. First Things First's vision and mission guide its work.

VISION

All Arizona's children are ready to succeed in school and in life.

MISSION

First Things First is one of the critical partners in creating a family-centered, comprehensive, collaborative and high-quality early childhood system that supports the development, health and early education of all Arizona's children birth to age 5.

The First Things First governance structure includes both a state level Board and local regional partnership councils. The model combines consistent state infrastructure and oversight with strong community involvement in the planning and delivery of services.

- The First Things First state Board (the Board) consists of nine (9) volunteer members, appointed by the Governor and confirmed by the Senate, and three (3) non-voting/ex-officio members who are State agency (Department of Health Services, Department of Education and Department of Economic Security) directors or appointees. The Board has responsibility for planning and implementing actions that will result in an improved system of early childhood development and health statewide.
- The regional partnership councils are voluntary local governance bodies responsible for planning and implementing actions to improve early childhood development and health outcomes within a defined geographic area of the state (a region). Regional partnership council members apply, are screened and interviewed, and then are appointed by the state Board.

The First Things First geographic regional boundaries were initially established in 2007. The boundaries are reviewed by the Board every two years. Any approved boundary changes are to take effect the following July 1.

Indian tribes recognized by the federal government with tribal lands located in the State of Arizona may:

1. Participate in the designated geographical region(s) in which their tribal lands are located or
2. Elect to have its tribal lands treated as a separate region by the Board. If a tribe so elects, it shall inform the Board by March 1 of any even-numbered year that it wishes to be treated as a separate region for the next two fiscal years.

There are 28 regional partnership councils throughout Arizona. See page 12 for details of the geographic areas served by each regional council. You may also visit FirstThingsFirst.org/regions to see a map with each region and other detailed regional information.
