

FIRST THINGS FIRST

Northwest Maricopa Region

2020 Impact Report

From birth to age 5, a child's brain grows more than any other time in life.

90%

of a child's brain growth happens before kindergarten.
Early childhood matters.

First Things First partners with families and communities to help our state's youngest children prepare for kindergarten and beyond.

Many young children in Arizona face challenges that threaten their healthy development and learning. In the FTF Northwest Maricopa Region, there are 55,078 children (under age 6) with 22% living in poverty.

Here is how FTF is working to support young children and their families in this region.

“Quality child care is critical to ensuring families can work and that our children are safe and prepared for kindergarten. We want to ensure that funding continues to flow to child care programs and services in our region, so they remain accessible to the greatest extent possible.”

Home visitation program helps new mom care for infant son in Wickenburg

Joyce Rodriguez first heard about home visitation when her son Jayden was a baby.

"I found out through my sister, who saw a flyer at Glendale Community College," Rodriguez said. "I thought he's too little. Why would I put him in that?"

The home visitation program that her sister was telling Rodriguez about was through Child and Family Resources. One of their programs provides a parent coach to meet with families of young children to provide voluntary, no-cost, in-home support to families.

The First Things First Northwest Maricopa Regional Partnership Council funds home visitation, which provides parents with regular in-home visits from a trained parent coach, who provides parenting information, models ways to support healthy development and shares connections to other community resources.

"The parent coaches were amazing," Rodriguez said, describing how her parent coach would come to her home in Wickenburg. Many times she brought unique activities, for example, a fishing activity that used a pretzel rod as a pole and colored cheese fish crackers for matching. "It was also a fun snack for the kids to eat," she said.

The parent coach also provided a list of community resources that let Rodriguez know about additional activities she could take her son to in the area. At the time, Rodriguez's husband was traveling frequently for work, and she appreciated the extra support of the home visitation program.

"I used to love going to the library to take him to story time," Rodriguez said.

When it was time for preschool, the parent coach encouraged Jayden's enrollment.

"I didn't know the way to go with pre-k," Rodriguez said. "She brought a list of nearby schools that had pre-k and helped me choose the right one."

A few years later, Rodriguez had her second child, a daughter, Jayleen. This time around, she signed up for the program immediately.

"The parent coaches were always there to help me with resources, They're teaching us, as we're teaching our kids." - Joyce Rodriguez, mother

"Jayleen wasn't talking at the age where she should have been," Rodriguez said.

Rodriguez and her parent coach worked with Jayleen using blocks with letters to encourage Jayleen to speak more. Eventually, after a developmental screening, the parent coach referred Rodriguez to Arizona's Early Intervention Program (AzEIP), which provides early intervention services for children under age 3. Jayleen is now receiving speech therapy.

"The parent coaches were always there to help me with resources," Rodriguez said. "They're teaching us, as we're teaching our kids."

Now, 6, Jayden was prepared for success when he started kindergarten and Jayleen at 2 is getting the speech support she needs.

"The program helped my son, he's so smart," Rodriguez said.
